ABOUT the collection

Today's generation is aware of the critical situation in regard to the environment more than ever and is eager to take movements towards a more sustainable future. This project has aimed to produce a modular, genderless and seasonless fashion collection taking inspiration from timeless classics that can be re-worn over a span of years, without having to be replaced whilst remaining in fashion trends to help reduce turnover and disposability of textile waste.

A collection of six outfits were designed based on the primary research and the outlook of creating genderless, modular, seasonless, and capsule wardrobe essentials in each outfit. In conjunction with the collection target of embodying timeless classic styles to enhance its product life.

ABOUT THE DESIGNER

DAISY LEE
MONCUR

I am currently in my fourth year at Heriot-Watt University studying BSc (Hons) Fashion Technology. For my final year project I have created a collection which conveys aspects of modular, genderless, seasonless and capsule wardrobe garments. I have always been captivated by the ability that certain colours in products and items of clothing manages to change moods or express emotions. I would like to think of myself as a creative individual, who is passionate about clothes and fashion, and who is naturally skilled at visual expression which in hopefully allows me to fully express myself creatively.
